

THE FORENSIC READ™

PRINCIPAL ADVISOR

Dr. Cristina Imre

Dr. Cristina Imre is a polymathic systems architect and strategic advisor helping leaders navigate the intersection of AI capability, human judgment, and governance. She writes about what is actually happening in AI, and what it means for the humans running the systems, not what is being sold.

Her work is anchored in The Human Model Problem: we are upgrading the human while forcing it to live inside a civilizational operating system built for a shorter-lived species.

She has spent two decades in the trenches understanding human nature and business success combined, advising boards and executives on The Mirror Test Framework™ and People Debt™, decision quality, and the invisible risks that technical scaling amplifies into crises.

FRAMEWORK: PEOPLE DEBT™

METHOD: FORENSIC READ

SCOPE: EXECUTIVE & ORG

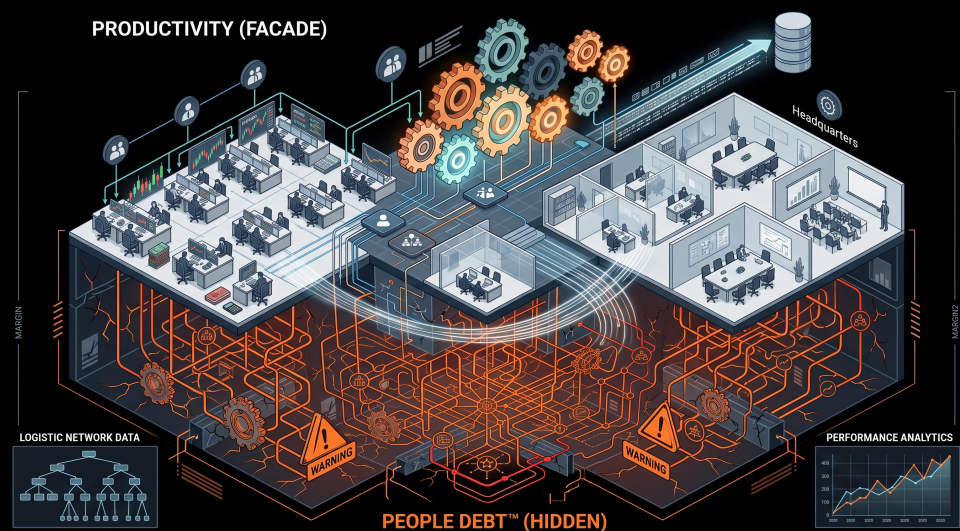

VERDICT: MIRROR TEST™

Your team still looks productive. That's the problem.

You've spent hundreds of thousands on AI, and the dashboards say you're winning. On the metrics, you probably are. But something feels off, and you can't put your finger on it.

Output is up. The judgment underneath is leaving through the back door. BCG surveyed 70 C-suite leaders, and half already see skill erosion in their own organizations. Your seniors run on autopilot. Your juniors never got the reps that build judgment. Your board numbers measure none of it.

People Debt™: The invisible liability of misalignment, lost judgment, and eroded trust. It compounds every quarter you scale. Charts never catch it. A layoff quarter always does.
